

Abraham (Abe) Bran is the Southwestern Law Review Special Projects Editor and President of the Southwestern Student Bar Association. Prior to starting law school, he worked at Joyce & Associate, PC. in Boston, Massachusetts under the Honorable William P. Joyce on a variety of humanitarian and business-related cases as an immigration paralegal. In Summer 2019, Mr. Bran externed at the Executive Office for Immigration Review where he researched and drafted decisions for several Immigration Judges at the Los Angeles Immigration Court. He is currently externing for the Honorable Judge Stuart Rice and the Los Angeles Superior Court.

At Southwestern, Mr. Bran is concentrating in civil litigation and advocacy and public interest law and hopes to pursue a legal career in civil and appellate litigation focusing on human and environmental rights. He was a clinical student advocate in Southwestern's Ninth Circuit Appellate Litigation Clinic and Southwestern's Community Lawyering Clinic. Mr. Bran is also pursuing a M.B.A./J.D. dual degree with the Drucker School of Management.

Mr. Bran's student note Empowering Immigration Judges to Sanction Attorneys Abusing the Powerless will be published in the second issue of the 50th volume of the Southwestern Law Review.